Chapter 1: Female Hormonal Cycle — Training & Nutrition Guide

| Phase          | Days (avg) | Dominant Hormone                | Training Recommendation                                                                     | Nutrition Focus                                                               |
|----------------|------------|---------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Menstrual      | 1–5        | Prostaglandins (low E+P)        | Light movement, yoga, walks. Reduce intensity. Rest is productive.                          | Iron-rich foods (spinach, dates, rajma). Anti-inflammatory: turmeric, ginger. |
| Follicular     | 6–13       | Estrogen rising                 | Increase intensity — this is your strongest phase. PR attempts, HIIT, heavy compound lifts. | Normal macros. Higher carbs support performance. Good protein.                |
| Ovulatory      | 14–16      | Estrogen peak + LH surge        | Peak performance. Maximum strength, speed. Compete or test maxes here.                      | Slightly ↑ calories. Anti-inflammatory foods. Omega-3.                        |
| Luteal (early) | 17–24      | Progesterone rising             | Moderate training. Slight fatigue normal. Good time for volume work.                        | ↑ Protein + healthy fats. Magnesium (reduces PMS). Reduce refined carbs.      |
| Luteal (late)  | 25–28      | Progesterone + Estrogen falling | Reduce volume and intensity. LISS cardio, flexibility. Listen to your body.                 | Reduce salt (water retention). Increase zinc, B6. Dark chocolate OK (Mg).     |
